

The following judges were asked by the LWV of Pullman (Whitman County) to evaluate the submitted artwork based on creativity to the theme of Democracy. The work will be judged on the student's creativity in response to the question "What does Democracy look like to you?".

Cori Daniti

After earning a BFA in painting from Washington State University and spending a couple decades fiddling with brushes, oils, pencils, markers, and most recently, the mouse attached to her computer, Cori has discovered an organic process involving layers and language. She creates her visual poems from her home studio her hometown of Pullman, WA. You can see her work on her website <http://www.coridantini.com>

Rosalie Harms

Rosalie completed a 34-year elementary teaching career all but two of which were in the Pullman School District. Her love for all things ART began early as her military family spent a significant amount of time in art galleries and museums as they traveled the world. Rosalie is famous for her fabulous bulletin boards (this is being edited by the mother of two of her students!) and the crafts the students made as part of their social studies units. She made ART an integral extension of history, literature, and science. In her retirement she has been active as a wedding/event coordinator which has allowed her to continue her creative endeavors. Rosalie is an active volunteer in Pullman.

Mayor Glenn Johnson

Mayor Glenn A. Johnson has served Pullman since 2004 and is in his fifth term. He is a professor emeritus from WSU after teaching 35 years in the Murrow College at WSU. He has been active in the community and serves on several boards in Pullman and statewide. He is currently the chair of the board of trustees of the Community Colleges of Spokane.

Ann Saberi

Ann serves as the Collection Manager at the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art WSU. She was born and raised on the Palouse and enjoys encouraging others to think creatively. Ann served many years as a judge for the Sunnyside Elementary Reflections Art Competition adding to her experience with youth artwork.

Barney Saneholtz

An artist since the age of 10 and now retired from working with the United States Forest Service, Barney has been living on the Palouse for 35+ years. The Palouse has been an inspiration for his artwork. His paintings have been exhibited in many places around the PNW including the Dahmen Barn in Uniontown, WA, and he is a member of the Palouse Watercolor Socius. You can see some of his artwork at <http://palousewatercolorsocius.com/home>.
